Interdisciplinary Studies

CENTER FOR ADVANCED STUDY IN THEORETICAL PSYCHOLOGY

Originally, the study of psychology at this University was conducted through the Department of Philosophy. Less than twenty years ago the two split, and the Department of Psychology became a member of the Faculty of Arts. About the same time, the Department of Educational Psychology was established. Psychology is well represented here. So why, in 1967, did J.R. Royce become Director of the new Center for Advanced Study in Theoretical Psychology, after having been Chairman of the Department of Psychology? Why was more, "advanced" study of psychology needed? Why "theoretical" psychology?

Strangely enough to one who knows little of the history of psychology, the Center (which in fact owes its existence largely to Dr. Royce) was created in part to bridge the rift between psychology and philosophy and to deal with the conceptual questions that are buried under the heaps of data that have been collected in the name of experimental psychology in this century.

The historical point to be made is simply that those who approach psychology from a more traditional, less data-oriented position are not necessarily willing to concede that "you can't say anything until all the facts are in." Those who question the nature of the mind, of knowledge and perception, have their roots too deep in philosophic ground to try to adapt themselves to experimental modes of discovery and proof.

And, though doctrinaire data-ists call theoretical psychologists dreamers and pen-pushers, implying that the latter are ignorant of the value of data, the Center's other aim is "to provide theoretical synthesis of empirical research," in other words, to make something coherent of the data that has been collected by others.

The Center is a rara avis in many ways. Trying not to be swept away by the whirlwinds of data that carry off so many psychologists, to fly in the face of the storms of jargon that the social sciences are infamous for, it is also attempting to raise psychology to maturity so that the discipline can fend for itself among other, ancient ones like philosophy and nourish itself on new ones like computing science.

Richard Kerr

After all, psychology is only a century old, and the young discipline has almost been persuaded that philosophical questions are "too hard" or irrelevant to it. Then again, computing science will surely help the Center when it comes to studying systems (a topic for future consideration) as well as in its attempts to bring coherence to the data it has access to.

In street talk, the Center might be said to be getting its head together. It has tremendous energy and a highly disciplined mode of pursuing its goals that persuade against any thought that it prefers musing to more active, judicious sorts of thought.

If, for example, its current research theme should be "the psychology of knowing," as it recently was, the Center will go at the theme with great singlemindedness, collecting information, data, and ideas and reviewing all aspects of "knowing," physiological, psychological, and philosophical. The goal is not to say what "knowing" is once and for all but to see what order can be set on available empirical knowledge and considered thought about the subject.

Both members of the Center and Distinguished Visiting Scholars invited to the Center contribute to the topic by participating in seminars and presenting papers. The seminars are of several types: there are closed seminars with members of the Center and the Visiting Scholars, seminars open to anyone interested in the topic at hand, and Seminars-in-the-Round, an annual formal series held on particular themes and featuring guest speakers, generally of international repute.

Every year or two, the Center plays host to the Banff Conference, at which Visiting Scholars, Center members, and invited contributors participate in intensive discussions, again centered around a theme. The Conference papers are compiled into a book, and three volumes have been published: Toward Unification in Psychology (1970), The Psychology of Knowing (1972), and Multivariate Analysis and Psychological Theory (1973); a fourth volume, Humanistic Psychology: Concepts and Criticisms, is ready for publication.

The Center is educationally "advanced" in that its programs are strictly at the doctoral and post-doctoral levels. Students must be accepted by the Department of Psychology and fulfil its requirements. But they must also do a theoretical thesis, rather than an experimental research project. They may take some courses (there are five) offered by the Center, but greater emphasis is placed on participation in the seminars, regular and informal, in which research results are explored.

In the future the Center may develop an interdisciplinary graduate program, if it can get the degree requirements of the relevant disciplines relaxed. Currently, graduate students who wish to take an interdisciplinary degree must meet the requirements of both disciplines, say psychology and philosophy. In fact, this is very demanding and not necessarily to the student's advantage; on the other hand, the Center must consider that a student needs a fairly wide background to begin to understand what theoretical psychology is about. If you feel confident because you know some Kant and some Freud, you will soon be humbled when the physiology of the brain or systems theory becomes the topic of discussion.

The Center has gained an international reputation for serious study. When visitors come and participate in its seminars they express amazement at how much is happening here on the periphery of populated North America. The timeliness and pertinence of the Center's studies are perhaps best known to psychologists, themselves; its scholarliness, diligence, and integrity are evident to anyone.

BOOKS

■ Der sozialistische Realismus: Theorie, Entwicklung und Versagen einer Literaturmethode by Edward Mozejko, Professor of Comparative Literature, has been published in Bonn by Bouvier Verlag Herbert Grundman. A Danish version of this book appeared in Copenhagen in May of this year.

PEOPLE

■ J.P. Bowland, Dean of the Faculty of Agriculture and Forestry, has been awarded the Distinguished Service Award for the Western Section of the American Society of Animal Science. This presentation was made at the annual meeting of the Western Section at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, during the week of 10 July.

■ Sharon Brintnell, Assistant Professor and Acting Chairman of the Department of Occupational Therapy, was elected President-Elect of the Canadian Association of Occupational Therapists at their recent National Conference in Halifax, Nova Scotia. This is the first time that a member outside the province of Ontario has held the position.

■ A.S.A. Mohsen, Associate Professor of Community Development and Sociology, will become Acting Director of the Division of Community Development from 1 July 1977 to 30 June 1978 while the Director, G.A. Eyford, is on sabbatical leave.

■ Stanley Greenhill, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Community Medicine, has returned from a Canadian International Development Agency short-term assignment to Swaziland. Dr. Greenhill was the leader of a team that was assessing the feasibility of the Government of Swaziland undertaking a health and nutrition survey to provide baseline data for its third five-year health plan.

■ Helen Madill, Assistant Professor of Occupational Therapy, was recently elected the Alberta member for the Board of the Canadian Association of Occupational Therapists. She was also appointed Chairman of the Education Council of the Association for a two-year term.

NOTICES

HOSTS AND HOSTESSES NEEDED

The International Student Office is looking for volunteers to host visiting Japanese students for a day or an evening, giving them an opportunity to visit a Canadian home. Those persons interested should contact 432-4145.

SINGLES GROUP ON CAMPUS

Persons who may be interested in forming a singles group on campus are invited to call Audrey Brooks at 434-1837 (evenings) to express their views and interests.

GFC MEMBERS ON THE SENATE

The GFC Nominating Committee is seeking nominations to fill vacancies for two members of General Faculties Council, to be elected by General Faculties Council, to serve on the Senate of the University of Alberta. Those who have suggestions for nominations or who are interested in serving on the Senate are requested to contact the Secretary of the Nominating Committee, 1-15 University Hall, telephone 432-4715.

STUDENT CINEMA

Because of the lockout of CUPE workers by the Students' Union, Student Cinema will be cancelled until further notice. However, cinema listings are still found in This Week and Next should a settlement be reached.

SAFE CAMPUS COMMITTEE

The GFC Nominating Committee is seeking nominations for one member of the academic staff to be elected by General Faculties Council to serve on the Safe Campus Committee. Those who have suggestions or who are interested in serving on this Committee are requested to contact the Secretary of the Nominating Committee, 1-15 University Hall, telephone 432-4715. It would be appreciated if a brief vitae could accompany any nomination.

PERMANENT RELOCATION OF OFFICES

The Division of East European Studies has moved from its old location in Assiniboia Hall to 300 Athabasca Hall.

The Canadian Institute of Ukrainian Studies has moved from Education North to 335 Athabasca Hall. New telephone numbers are: General Office, 432-2972; Research Centre, 432-2674; and Director's Office, 432-2973.

The University Publications Office has moved from its old location in Assiniboia Hall to 434 Athabasca Hall.

The University Press has moved from its old location in Assiniboia Hall to 450 Athabasca Hall. The telephone number remains the same; the Director, L.E.S. Gutteridge, may now be reached at that number instead of 432-3694.

WOMEN AND THE LAW

The final two seminars on women and the law will be presented by the Women's Project of Student Legal Services in 113 Law Centre. On 2 August the topic is "Wills and estates" and on 8 August "Women in the workforce" will be considered. Both seminars begin at 7:30 p.m.

RESEARCH GRANTS

Granting Agencies: Application Deadlines

This list of deadline dates for submissions to granting agencies for research funds, exchange programs, and travel grants is published every month in Folio. In order to allow sufficient time for processing, all applications should reach the Research Grants and Contracts Office at least ten days before the deadline date. Where other University resources are involved, the time requirement may be much longer than ten days and such applications should therefore be submitted well in advance. An extra copy of the application should be provided for the Research Grants and Contracts Office.

Nominations for Chancellor

To serve four years commencing
1 July 1978

The Chancellor represents the public interest in the University, is elected from the general public
by the University Senate, and acts as:

1. Chairman of the Senate
  2. Member of the Board of Governors
  3. Representative of the University at ceremonial occasions
  4. Member of University associations and foundations
- Nominees should be Canadian citizens, and should possess a strong interest in university-community affairs and time adequate to apply to the considerable duties involved.
Expenses associated with the Chancellorship are provided.

We encourage nominations or enquiries before 30 September 1977
addressed to:

Descriptive or Experimental Studies

The Alberta Advisory Committee for Educational Studies will be pleased to receive applications for grants to support descriptive or experimental studies in education.

Grants in excess of $2,000 are awarded only rarely because of limited available resources. Grants cannot be given for travel nor for research which is part of graduate studies.

Application forms may be obtained from and should be returned to Helen Mitchell, 1320B Education Tower, the University of Calgary.

Completed applications received by 26 September will be in time for processing this fall.
